WILLIAMSBURG The Williamsburg Health Foundation welcomes two new trustees: attorney Paul W. Gerhardt and real estate broker and local business leader, Robert (Bob) Singley. “We are delighted that both Paul and Bob have accepted nomination to our board. Each brings a passion for this community and a long record of service to it,” says Board of Trustees Chair, Doug Myers.

“With Paul just finishing his term as chair of the James City County Economic Development Authority and Bob currently serving as chair of the board for the Greater Williamsburg Chamber & Tourism Alliance, we know we have two new trustees who understand the needs of our community. They understand how critical it is that our community, first and foremost, must be a community of healthy individuals that take care of themselves and each other.”

Myers also announced that Allison Brody, formerly the Director of Development at Child Development Resources, joined the foundation staff on January 1 as the Director of Community Resource Development and Engagement.

“New for the foundation, this position will take a two-pronged approach to improving health in this community,” explains Jeanne Zeidler, President of the Williamsburg Health Foundation.

“First, Allison’s considerable marketing and communications experience will help the foundation share critical messages about the state of health in our community and how each and every person, no matter their age, income, or education, can help to improve it,” said Zeidler.

“Second, Allison will offer our grantee organizations the opportunity for coaching in all aspects of fundraising. Allison spent many years as an independent prospect researcher and grant writer as well as a successful direct fundraiser. Between her ability to find new resources for the community and her knowledge of our community, she can help organizations to increase their capacity and enable them to do more with more.”

In 2014, the Williamsburg Health Foundation seeks to be a trusted and effective resource in perpetuity for improving the health and wellbeing of people living in greater Williamsburg. Since its founding in 1996, the foundation has distributed more than 55 million dollars to improve the health of the community. This year, the foundation celebrates 10 years as a private, independent foundation.
